Samantha has recently joined CUSP as a landscape technician while studying Landscape Architecture at QUT. With a working background in Media and a love for plants, she was initially drawn to the social and ecological aspects of Landscape Architecture. While at university, she has fostered a passion for strategic urban planning and community-centred design.

In her professional practise, Samantha hopes to contribute to projects that explore this duality of people and place and create resilient urban landscapes which respond to the needs of all people and the environment.
